Miss Hearst Is Released in Custody of Parents on Bail of $1.5 Million

By WALLACE TURNER

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 19—Patricia Hearst was freed from prison today after a family posted bail totaling $1.5 million, $100,000 of it in cash, with two other family members.

Miss Hearst, who had been in prison for the last 14 months, is eligible for release in the custody of her parents, according to her conviction for bank robbery.

Her release followed a brief news conference at which her only statement was, "I would like to go home." She said she would like to go home now, and she would like to get this with so I can go home.

Her lawyer, Albert Johnson, would allow her to answer any questions in a press conference.

Miss Hearst's father, Randolph A. Hearst, president of Hearst Corporation and chairman of the board of directors of the company, and his twin brother, Paul, signed documents to satisfy the $1.5 million bail required to allow Miss Hearst to remain free pending her state appeal on an 11-count indictment there for a street shooting.

Today, her family supplied $100,000 in cash and $800,000 in surety bond as a

CONSUMER PRICE RISE OF 0.3% IN OCTOBER LEAST SINCE MARCH

Amount of Increase for 12 Months Also Declines—Reserve Board Cuts Discount Rate to 5 1/4 %

By ELLEN SHANAHAN
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19—The pace of inflation continued to abate in October as consumer prices registered their smallest increase since March, the Labor Department reported today.

The report also showed that the increase in consumer prices in the 12 months that ended in October was the smallest for any 12-month period since the one that ended in April 1973. Early 1973 marked the start of the period of large price increases caused by crop failures, the actions of the oil cartel, the devaluation of the dollar and the end of strict price controls.

The Consumer Price Index in October stood at 173.3 percent of its base, which is 100 calculated on average prices in 1967.

Recent Rises Compared

The increase in the overall index for the month was three-tenths of 1 percent, as against four-tenths in September and increases averaging five-tenths of 1 percent a month in the April-August period. In March, the rise was two-tenths of 1 percent.

Meanwhile, the Federal Reserve Board reduced its discount rate, the interest it charges member banks, to 5 1/4 percent from 5 1/2 percent in a move widely construed as a response to the "pause" in the growth of the economy. And the Morgan Guaranty Trust Company unexpectedly cut its prime lending rate for its most creditworthy customers to 6 1/4 percent from 6 1/2 percent. [Page 31.]

For the 12 months ended in October, the increase in the price index was 5.3 percent. This compares with an increase of 7 percent in 1975 and raises the possibility that the increase in consumer prices for all of 1976 may be little more than 5 percent, if things continue to go well.

The increase in the 12 months that ended April 1973, as the period of tremendous inflation was just getting underway, was 5.1 percent.

Factors in October Rise

The increase in the price index in October stemmed mainly from higher prices for new cars, gasoline, natural gas, electricity, transportation services and fresh fruits and vegetables.

Food prices, overall, rose three-tenths of 1 percent, after adjustment of the statistics to eliminate the effects of normal seasonal changes.

In addition to vegetable prices, which increased substantially for the third consecutive month, prices of beef, poultry, eggs and fresh fruits also rose, after declines in September. The prices of coffee and dairy products went up, but not by much.

NEW YORK CITY DEBT MORATORIUM IS UPSET BY STATE'S HIGH COURT, BUT PAYMENT NOW IS NOT ORDERED

Judges Will Make Decision on Reimbursement Method —M.A.C. Urges Calm

Political leaders reacted with dismay but no panic late yesterday afternoon to the New York State Court of Appeals decision invalidating the moratorium on repayment of New York City notes, but the news did cause a sharp drop in the prices of bonds of the Municipal Assistance Corporation.

Governor Carey held a news conference outside his Manhattan office at 1350 Avenue of the Americas, flanked by First Deputy Mayor John E. Zuccotti, City Comptroller Harrison J. Goldin and Felix G. Rohatyn, the chairman of the M.A.C., which helped draft the moratorium legislation. The Governor said he had been prepared for "an adverse decision."

"We will be looking for means of shoring up the full faith and credit of the state," he added.

Mr. Rohatyn said that there were "any number" of alternatives and that "there is little doubt we'll come up with something."

Mayor Beame's mood was described as "very somber" by Mr. Zuccotti, who spoke with him three times by telephone yesterday afternoon. The Mayor's office announced that Mr. Beame would fly back to New York immediately from Israel, where he had been touring the country with other mayors.

"There is no cause for panic or undue concern," a M.A.C. attorney declared as Mr. Carey's aides huddled in the Governor's office.

"I have to be optimistic," said Victor Goebman, chairman of the Municipal Labor Committee and executive director of District Council 37 of the American Federation of State, City and Municipal Employees. "I can't believe that after all we've gone through, the sacrifices the people and unions of this city have made, that New York will go down."

In Washington, Treasury Secretary William E. Simon said last night that he was "absolutely not discouraged" by the court decision.

Dorothy Schiff Agrees to Sell Post To Murdoch, Australian Publisher

By DEIRDRE CARMODY

Rupert Murdoch

Dorothy Schiff, editor in chief and publisher of The New York Post, announced yesterday that she had agreed to sell the afternoon daily to Rupert Murdoch, the Australian publisher whose vast empire includes newspapers in his country, the United States and England.

The details of the transaction involving The Post, the oldest continuously publishing daily newspaper in the country, were not disclosed. Mrs. Schiff and Mr. Murdoch issued a joint statement late yesterday afternoon saying that the purchase of the newspaper would be subject to "the preparation and execution of a definitive agreement of sale and a satisfaction of various conditions."

"Rupert Murdoch is a man of strong commitment to the spirit of independent, progressive journalism," Mrs. Schiff said in statement. "I am confident he will carry on vigorously in the tradition I value so deeply."

Mr. Murdoch's publications, which include 83 newspapers and 11 magazines, generally appeal to a mass market, emphasizing crime, sex and other sensational news. Among his newspapers are Britain's largest-circulation newspaper, News of the World; the London tabloid, The Sun; The San Antonio (Tex.) Express and Evening News, and The National Star, a United States weekly tabloid.

The 73-year-old Mrs. Schiff, who ran her newspaper with a firm hand and in an intensely personal manner, will stay on at The Post as a consultant for five years, according to the statement.

"The Post will continue to serve New York and New Yorkers and maintain its present policies and traditions," Mr. Murdoch said.

Brazil's Catholic Bishops Condemn Military Regime

By JONATHAN KANDELL
Special to The New York Times

RIO DE JANEIRO, Nov. 19—The Roman Catholic Church came out this week with its strongest condemnation of the right-Brazilian military Government since last month's arrest of Gen. Ernesto Geisel assumed office.

The only concession made by the church to the Geisel Government was in the timing of its document, which was released after the municipal elections last Monday.

Although the complete results of the election are not yet in hand, it appears clear that the center-left opposition party, the Brazilian Democratic Movement, made impressive gains against the pro-Government party, the Alliance for National Renewal, particularly in the large cities. The results will not affect the military's strong grip on power but will be viewed as a test of popular support.

The church document was prompted by several violent incidents recently with the express intention of improving relations with the church.

The bishops asserted that the Government's preoccupation with internal security had reduced the people to silence and had led to an atmosphere of fear.

The fatal shooting of the Rev. João Bosco Burnier by a military policeman in October when the priest protested against the torturing of a woman prisoner at a jail he was visiting.

The kidnapping of Bishop Adriano Hipolito from his diocese in a Rio de Janeiro working-class suburb in September by ultrarightists believed linked to police elements. The Bishop, who had spoken out repeatedly against hundreds of police death-squad murders in his diocese, was beaten, stripped and painted red before he was released.

The church leaders were particularly

North's Loss of Jobs and Industry To South Overstated, Study Finds

By AGIS SALPUKAS

The well-publicized shift of industry and jobs from the North to the South has been greatly exaggerated, according to a study by a key Federal agency. It also found that the "rhetoric and biased studies" that set the regions into competition may harm the economic development of both.

The study, sponsored by the Office of Economic Research of the Economic Development Administration, challenges many of the underlying assumptions reached by the Coalition of Northeast Governors, which presented a broad program last weekend to revive the economy of the Northeast.

Many of the seven Governors in the group called for reversal of the flow of Federal funds from the Sunbelt states to the Northeast, which they said had lost industry and jobs to the South.

The study, prepared by Carol L. Jusenius, an assistant professor of city and regional planning at Ohio State University, and Larry G. Ledebur, associate professor of economics at Denison University in Granville, Ohio, is titled "A Myth in the Making: The Southern Economic Challenge and Northern Economic Decline."

While the study asserted that it did not mean to minimize the "serious economic difficulties" that confront the Northeastern states, the professors said in interviews yesterday that they became concerned when media reports, conferences and studies repeated assumptions that they said were not supported by data.

The study, which they said had been prepared without any interference from the sponsoring agency, made the following points:

There has not been a massive migration of workers from the North to the South, and those that have left may return once the overall economy improves.

The shift of companies from North to South has "played a minor" role in the loss of jobs in the North and in the growth of manufacturing jobs in the South in the last five years.

The South is still generally below the national average in per-capita income and the trend of the last decade, during which the gap in income levels between the North and South narrowed, was reversed in 1975.

The South still has a larger number of poor, and "they receive less than the national average in per-capita Federal Government expenditures."

In some areas of Federal spending, such as defense contracts, both the North

Regents Dismiss Nyquist as Education Commissioner

By LEONARD BUDER

ALBANY, Nov. 19—The State Board of Regents yesterday dismissed Ewald Nyquist as Education Commissioner effective June 30.

The move came at an emotion-laden meeting during which members of the highest education policy-making body exchanged bitter charges and angry accusations concerning the board's motivation in dismissing the controversial 62-year-old Commissioner.

Regent board members and State Department officials were present, and a deputy commissioner, Stephen D. Sheldon, submitted his resignation in a show of support for Mr. Nyquist. The Commissioner himself appeared struggling to hold back tears.

The dismissal, believed to be the first of an Education Commissioner in the nearly 200-year history of the state education system, came as the result of a steadily widening rift between the Board of Regents and Mr. Nyquist, its chief administrator.

The formal resolution to terminate Mr. Nyquist's services gave no reason for the action.

William Jovanovich, who voted with the majority, said that the board had "no confidence" in the Commissioner and that for this reason, "Mr. Nyquist cannot in the years ahead serve effectively as chief executive officer to the Regents."

But Dr. Kenneth B. Clark, the lone black member, charged that the Regents had capitulated to political pressures and ousted the Commissioner because of his

Dusseldorf, the Place Where Money Is Made

By CRAIG R. WHITNEY
Special to The New York Times

DUSSELDORF, West Germany, Nov. 18—“I wanted a life with a certain amount of luxury,” said Dieter Kleinsorg, a partner in one of the city’s most successful clothing import-export businesses. “I did not want millions—just a nice apartment, a fine car and a certain amount of freedom.” His penthouse duplex apartment, his Porsche Dusseldorf Carrera sports car and a life style that includes eight weeks’ vacation a year in places like Martini and St. Moritz cost him $50,000 a year, he says he can afford it comfortably.

In Dusseldorf people make money. It is one of those places where more people do it more successfully than most, for it is the richest city in a rich country, its wealth built on the industrial empires of the nearby Ruhr.

Almost 400 of its 680,000 people earn more than $400,000 a year—one Deutschmark millionaiere for every 1,700.

Sixty to seventy percent destroyed in the war, Dusseldorf is now a modern city of offices, stylish shops where men’s shoes sell for $100 a pair and a broad, tree-lined boulevard, the Königswalle, which is divided by a canal and known all over the country for its elegance.

Gerhard Manthey, a 27-year-old union member who thinks the women here are almost too well-dressed, commented with some disgust: “The Dusseldorfer like to show off and talk about how much money they have. The office girls go broke trying to look well-dressed, but they like to snub the farmers from the suburbs when they come in on Saturdays to go shopping.”

Mr. Manthey, a 27-year-old bachelor who came here from Darmstadt a year ago, finds Dusseldorf not only snobbish but clique-ridden. The bars are so noisy, it is impossible to have a conversation,” he said of the Old City, along the Rhine, where there are discotheques and restaurants set in a pedestrian zone.

“If you ask me what is typical about Dusseldorf, I would say an obsession with expensiveness,” he went on. He feels the city does not consciously discriminate against proletarians like him; it is the headquarters for the seven-million-member German Labor Union Federation, which is as powerful as any of the more than 2,000 corporations and industries based here.

Two hundred of these concerns are Japanese, and the biggest single construction site in the city is the concrete German-Japanese Center on Immermannstrasse, a rather nondescript avenue that leads through a virtual forest of Japanese-language signs to the main railroad station. It is the shopping center for the 3,000 Japanese who live in and around Dusseldorf—the biggest Japanese settlement in Europe, the seat of a base for trade dealings throughout the European Economic Community—where they spend $20 million a year, according to well-pleased city officials.

“I wanted to live away from Japan a while,” said Yuko Kawamura, a sales clerk in one of the four Nippon-Kan food stores here, who speaks English but not much German. She lives across the Rhine in the wealthy suburb of Oberkassel, along with too many other Japanese to suit her and not enough German friends. Of Dusseldorf she said: “It’s a good place to come to make money.”

The German businessman, Mr. Kleinsorg, a blond, trim man of 35 years who believes he has made enough money to think about getting married next year, is on a business trip to Japan now. He is looking for material for his import concern, one of the smaller enterprises in a city dominated by the traditional giants of German industry.

“I have to buy $2 million to $3 million worth of clothes for the next winter,” he said nervously before he left. “I do not sleep well for a few months. Sometimes when I realize I have 60 seasons’ worth of clothes, I get a sick feeling in the pit of my stomach.”

One result of all this profitable enterprise is a balanced municipal budget of $865 million dollars, most of it financed by a tax on companies, based on a combination of profits, net worth and wages. Most of this income tax is paid by the millionaires to the federal Government, so the city has had to run into debt to pay for an airport, several architecturally stunning bridges across the Rhine and a subway, on which construction is only just beginning.

The Mayor, Klaus Bungert, a Social Democrat, does not worry about unemployment. “There is such a big job market here,” he explained, “that anyone who wants one can find a job.” His worries, if one can call them that, are not like New York’s but concern how much chaos the subway excavations are going to cause.

One institution in the area to be affected by the excavation is the Park Hotel, where Hitler appeared in January 1932 to try to win over the wealthy of the Industrieklub. Both the hotel and the club have risen again, but to different values. Dr. Konrad Henkel, owner of one of the largest West German chemical factories, appears in the mirrored modern but not very sumptuous club rooms nowadays to preside over the gatherings of the German-American Friendship Society.

Bavarians Vote to End German Conservative Alliance

Special to The New York Times

BONN, Nov. 19—The conservative Christian Social Union of Bavaria, led by Franz Josef Strauss, voted today to break away from the Christian Democratic Union and end a 27-year alliance of parties that has shaped postwar West German politics since the days of Konrad Adenauer.

According to an aide in his headquarters in Munich, Mr. Strauss wants to make his party a national force instead of a regional group—and to win enough extra votes to put conservatives back into power after seven years in opposition. The next national elections are scheduled for 1980.

Mr. Strauss, who had been defense minister and finance minister in Christian Democratic governments in the 1950's and 1960's, led his party to capture 60 percent of the vote in Bavaria in the last national elections, on Oct. 3. But nationwide, the two opposition conservative parties captured only 48 percent of the vote for their candidate, Helmut Kohl, and were unable to turn Chancellor Helmut Schmidt out of office.

Until now, the two parties have been organized as one in the 496-seat Parliament in Bonn. If they split, the Christian Social Union would have 53 seats and the Christian Democrats 191. They would probably continue to vote together on the major issues, but Mr. Kohl would not be the undisputed chief of the parliamentary opposition when the newly elected Bundestag, or lower house, convenes next month.

The decision today took Mr. Kohl, who was in Mainz, by surprise, according to a close personal aide.

“He was cool, but we are not going to take this lying down,” the assistant said. Mr. Kohl later described the action as “a step in the wrong direction,” and began a feverish round of consultations aimed at getting the step reversed.

Today’s revolt took place in a bastion of conservatism, Tyrolean hats and regional traditionalism in the foothills of the Bavarian Alps—the spa town of Kreuth, south of Munich. Most of the party’s 53 representatives in parliament met there secretly and voted, 30 to 18, not to continue their alliance with the Christian Democrats.

The political position of Mr. Strauss is not so different from that of Mr. Kohl, but the two men do not get along personally. The Bavarian leader has been a particularly outspoken critic of the Government’s detente policies. He has been somewhat more conservative than Mr. Kohl on social policy. But the message between them is tactical.

Mr. Strauss believes two conservative parties could win more votes. Some of Mr. Kohl’s aides have turned out the other way. “I am all sure all his own party will win this step either,” one of them said.

Politically, the conservative many of whom are Roman Catholics always marched to a different rhythm. In 1949, when the Federal Republic was established, the Bavarians alone to rally its constitution—it is to give them enough regional seats.

When Willy Brandt, the former Chancellor, began the process of reconciliation with the Communist states of Europe, the Bavarians led the Parliament and in the end what they saw as a “giveaway.”

Mr. Strauss has always had his aggressive, emotional style painging was more effective cool, “Protestant” manner favor Christian Democrats of the north of West Germany. He began loudly, after the conservative defeat last month.

The Christian Social Union has members in Bavaria, compared roughly 600,000 Christian Democrats of the country.

Only once, under Konrad Adenauer, did the alliance of Christian Democrats and the Christian Social more than 50 percent of the postwar West German Government have been coalitions, with the Democratic Party determining Now led by the Foreign Minister Schmidt Cabinet, Hans-Dietrich Genscher, a liberal European terms, close to the left, won 7.9 percent of the vote.

U.S., in Policy Shift, Will Not Block Angola Application as U.N. Member

By KATHLEEN TELTSCH
Special to The New York Times

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Nov. 19—The United States, in a shift of policy, said today that it would not block the admission of Angola to United Nations membership.

Last June, the United States vetoed Angola's request because it objected to the continued presence in Angola of thousands of Cuban troops who, with Soviet help, had assisted the Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola to triumph over Western-backed factions and secure control of the former Portuguese colony.

The American change in position was made known to delegates of the 15-member Security Council at a private meeting by Albert W. Sherer, Jr., who said the United States would "not stand in the way" of Angola's entry. It will become the 146th member of the world body.

Applicants are admitted by the General Assembly acting on the recommendation of the Council and entry can be blocked by a negative vote from any of the Council's five permanent members—the United States, Britain, China, France or the Soviet Union.

Shift on Vietnam Not Expected

The United States last Monday vetoed the admission of Vietnam on the ground that Hanoi had so far failed to account for the almost 800 American servicemen missing in action in the Vietnam War.

The shift on Angola was ascribed to a number of elements and American representatives said privately that no such change was to be expected on Vietnam.

Mr. Sherer indicated to delegates today that when the Angolan request came up Monday in the Security Council, the United States would abstain, reflecting that it was not supporting entry.

China almost certainly will not participate, which is the position it took in June when it attacked the Soviet Union for interfering in the West African state.

The American shift, according to diplomatic sources, was the outcome of a number of developments.

William W. Scranton, the chief United States delegate, was said to have impressed on Washington that another veto would antagonize African countries and might even hamper the efforts being made by the United States to assist political settlements in southern Africa with the help of moderate African countries.

Cuban Cutback Indicated

Privately, American representatives have been saying that there seem to be some indications of a cutback in the Cuban force, estimated in June at 15,000, and support for Cuban claims that they are being replaced with non-fighting forces sent to assist the new Government headed by President Agostino Neto.

Because the Marxist-oriented Government is still locked in fighting with opposition elements, there had been expectation among some diplomats that this would be used to justify a veto.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, at a news conference on Tuesday, said that the continued fighting seemed to show that the Luanda regime was not establishing control even with the presence of the Cubans—currently estimated by Mr. Kissinger to number 12,000 to 13,000.

According to qualified diplomats, the Vietnamese were aware of the impending shift on Angola and were outraged by the implication that Washington was more willing to see the admission of Angola, while fighting still raged, than accept Vietnam as a member.

Dinh Ba Thi, Vietnam's top observer here, said during an interview earlier today that he foresaw no signs of any change in the "hostile attitude" shown toward his country by the Ford Administration. He also said he hoped that the Administration of President-elect Jimmy Carter would not continue this "erroneous policy."

U.S. BELIEVES DAMASCUS WILL EXTEND U.N. FORCE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19 (AP)—In the opinion of State Department experts, Syria will extend the six-month mandate of the United Nations peacekeeping force on the Golan Heights between Israel and Syria. Damascus has not given formal notice, but the State Department sources say that Syria has made it clear that the United Nations force will be allowed to remain beyond the Nov. 30 expiration of the present mandate. Officials say a potential Middle East danger has been put aside for at least six more months. Israeli and Syrian troops on the Golan Heights have been separated by the United Nations force since June 1974, although Israel continues to occupy most of the Golan Heights area taken in the 1967 war. Under a disengagement agreement, the mandate of the United Nations force on the Golan Heights is extended for six months at a time. In the past, Syria has given an impression of being reluctant to extend the mandate or has attached conditions to an extension. Six months ago, for example, Syria demanded and obtained a related agreement that the United Nations Security Council consider the question of a Palestinian state. This time, there have been no demands and the Syrians are quietly agreeing to an extension.

Palestinians Preparing to Open Office in Washington

By BERNARD GWERTZMAN
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19—The Palestine Liberation Organization has taken steps to open an office in Washington to lobby with American officials and members of Congress and to disseminate information about the Palestinian cause.

The office, which was authorized by Yasser Arafat, the leader of the P.L.O., was registered formally with the Justice Department last night by Sabri Elias Jiryis, a Palestinian-born P.L.O. official, described as a moderate, who is presently in Washington. He said in a telephone conversation that he must complete other formalities before he would be able to announce the opening of the office.

The very presence of Mr. Jiryis in Washington and the likelihood of a P.L.O. office here is an extremely sensitive issue for the State Department, which is aware of Israeli suspicions that the United States is looking for ways of modifying its policy of nonrecognition of the P.L.O. There already is an Arab information center in Washington that circulates a newsletter that strongly supports the Palestinian cause.

No Change in U.S. Policy

State Department officials stressed that there was no change in the policy toward the P.L.O. That policy is that the United States will not deal with that group in a substantive way until it accepts the existence of Israel as a sovereign state and the pertinent Security Council resolutions calling for a negotiated solution for the Middle East conflict.

Mr. Jiryis, who left what is now Israel in 1970, entered this country a month ago with a Sudanese passport. The State Department knew he was coming and knew that he was a leading Palestinian intellectual, who headed the Israel section of the P.L.O. Research Center in Beirut. But officials said they had no indication he would seek to open an office here.

Because he was a member of the Palestine National Council, the top Palestinian organization, Mr. Jiryis was denied any appointments with Administration officials, who flatly refused to see him directly in keeping with the policy of no dealings with P.L.O. officials. He has seen private individuals in Washington, however.

Under United States law, there is no prohibition against opening an office on behalf of some foreign government or group. All that is necessary is for the individual to register with the Justice Department as a foreign agent and to supply detailed information about his source of money and his intentions.

In addition, if he plans to deal with members of Congress, he must register on Capitol Hill and send a letter to the State Department announcing his intentions.

State and Justice Department officials insisted that the decision of Mr. Jiryis to open a P.L.O. office was taken after he arrived and that there was no law barring him from doing so.

The only question that may arise, officials said, is when his current short-term visa expires and he applies for an extension to run the office. At that point, it is possible that it might be denied. "We are not a license office," a Justice Department official said. "A person does not come to us and ask permission to open an office. All the law requires is that he inform us of what he is doing and that he label his propaganda as being that of a foreign agent."

Mr. Jiryis, in a phone conversation, also said he had not detected any shift in policy by the United States toward the P.L.O. He confirmed he had not been able to see any officials.

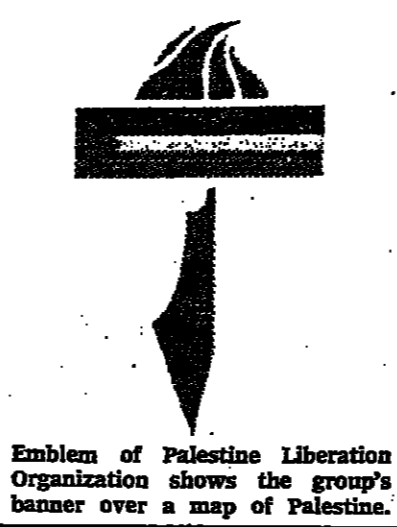

He added that the P.L.O. had an office in Washington in 1965-66 and has had a similar office in New York since 1965, presently at 103 Park Avenue.

In his registration with the Justice Department, Mr. Jiryis said he received $10,000 on Oct. 18 from the P.L.O. headquarters in Beirut to organize an "information office in Washington."

Doubts a Single Palestine State

He said he dealt with Mr. Arafat, chairman of the Executive Committee of the P.L.O.

"Registrant has been and will continue to be engaged in organizing the Washington office of the P.L.O.," he said. "Henceforth he will act as director of that office and will meet with officials of agencies and departments of the executive branch of the U.S. Government. Members and staff of the legislative branch, members of the press and public, and with representatives of foreign governments, and prepare and distribute and supervise the preparation and distribution of written materials to the above and participate in public meetings and appearances, all with a view to disseminating information concerning the P.L.O., its policies and objectives."

In an interview in 1975 with Americans traveling in the Middle East, published later in an Israeli magazine, Mr. Jiryis said while he "theoretically" supported the P.L.O.'s declared aim of a single, unified state to incorporate what is now Israel, he was in practice "against it."

"I would not like to see a single state now in Palestine," he said in the interview. Rather, he advocated the concept favored by Egypt and other so-called moderate Arabs of giving the Palestinians a state in what is now the West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip, both occupied by Israel. Israel, however, continues to oppose any separate Palestinian state and advocates a federated Jordanian-Palestinian state.

Britain's Tories Shuffle Leadership

By ROBERT B. SEMPLE JR.
Special to The New York Times

LONDON, Nov. 19—Margaret Thatcher, the Conservative Party leader, today shuffled part of her "front bench"—her main spokesmen on public issues and the people she is presumably grooming to take government posts if the Tories win the next general election.

What was important about the move was not the identity of the newcomers, or of the casualties, but rather its timing.

The Labor Government of Prime Minister James Callaghan is in disarray and the House of Commons has nearly disappeared after by-elections to fill vacant seats, some of the Labor Party's members are in open revolt, and the House of Lords is trying to destroy or at least revise beyond recognition legislation that the Prime Minister considers vital to the continued support of the unions and the party's left wing.

Accordingly, Mrs. Thatcher was especially on a day when there was little major news—to give the public an impression of forward movement in the Tory ranks at a moment when Labor seems to be going backwards.

The most visible casualty of the shake-up was Reginald Maudling, who was stripped of his post as Conservative spokesman on foreign policy. Mr. Maudling, who some years ago was considered a candidate to lead the party, has been under attack for his lackluster speeches and his association with John Poulson, an architect now in jail who was accused of attempting to bribe public officials to win business.

Chosen to replace him is John D. Churchill, 36-year-old grandson of Prime Minister Edward Heath, views on foreign affairs are some of a mystery, but he is not expected to challenge the strongly anti-Soviet expressed by Mrs. Thatcher.

At least one appointment is expected to reinforce those views—that of W. Churchill, 36-year-old grandson of Prime Minister Edward Heath, views on foreign affairs are some of a mystery, but he is not expected to challenge the strongly anti-Soviet expressed by Mrs. Thatcher.

Other major appointments also strong conservative flavor. The "shadow" minister for education, Rhodys Boyson, an outspoken headmaster in a state-supported school who believes in strong discipline.

The new shadow spokesman of Edward Taylor of Glasgow, has taken a hard line on crime. The third new senior member of shadow cabinet—after Mr. David Mr. Taylor—is Tom King, who spokesman on energy questions.

No new role was announced, but none was expected. Relations with Mrs. Thatcher and remains ambiguous.

Israel Is Again Criticized in a UNESCO Resolution

ARROBI, Kenya, Nov. 19 (AP)—A key mission of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization voted today to reaffirm its condemnation of Israeli excavations and building acts in Jerusalem.

The vote marked the second consecutive day on which Israel was criticized for its internal policies. Another UNESCO session yesterday condemned the country's educational and cultural policies in territories captured in the 1967 war. It was considered certain that the conference of the organization would find final approval to the resolutions.

The resolutions were adopted despite strenuous efforts to remove outright condemnation of Israel. But the combined votes of Arab, African, other third-world nations and the Soviet bloc were more than enough to pass the resolutions. Fifty-five nations including the United States and the nine members of the European Common Market voted against the resolution introduced today. The final tally was 70 to 25 with 14 abstentions.

The resolution alleges that Israeli excavations are altering the historic character of Jerusalem. But Israel's delegate, Na-Bar-Yaacov, said the resolution, "is a consequence of political warfare being conducted against us by neighboring Arab states."

U.S. Representative Albert H. Quie, Republican of Minnesota, said before the conference that the adoption of the resolution would make it more difficult for the United States to resume its contribution to UNESCO. Congress cut off a $15-million contribution in 1974 after Israel was barred from the organization's Euro-regional group.

Chile Says Ban Is Lifted for Domestic Exiles

SANTIAGO, Chile, Nov. 19 (AP)—The Chilean Government announced today that all Chileans banished by decree to parts of the country will be allowed to return home.

The announcement follows the mass release this week of political prisoners held in detention centers near the capital and elsewhere.

A statement issued by the Interior Ministry said that under provisions of a state decree, 189 persons currently are forced to live away from their homes. The regulations have been lifted and regional officials are being instructed to "arrange the return of these persons to their places of residence," the statement said. It also said that the banishment to towns in the arid north of Chile or in the rainy south. These regions have traditionally been used for such political banishments, a practice that dates back many decades.

Donations in Johannesburg for State Fund for Blacks

JOHANNESBURG, Nov. 19 (Reuters)—A group of white businessmen of South Africa announced a fund aimed at raising millions of dollars to improve the lives of urban blacks in South Africa.

The fund will include supporters of the Government and of the opposition. It is intended to provide money for home ownership and funds for education and recreation. A newspaper executive, David de Villiers, said it was a nonpolitical project offered in a spirit of assistance to the Government and not as a confrontation with it. The Cabinet discussed the plan this week.

World Pleds in U.N. for New Economic Order

SPECIAL TO THE NEW YORK TIMES
UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Nov. 19—The world majority in the General Assembly called on the developed countries today for concessions toward establishing a new world economic order.

In 99 votes in favor, the Assembly called on the negotiators of the Paris Conference on International Economic Cooperation to achieve specific goals by the middle of next month. The conference is scheduled to end. Delegation voted against the resolution. The 30 abstentions included the industrialized countries and the Communist bloc countries, the latter because they consider the Paris conference activity outside the purview of the United Nations, the former because they believe the resolution one-sided and unfair to the limited progress already achieved in the last year of negotiations.

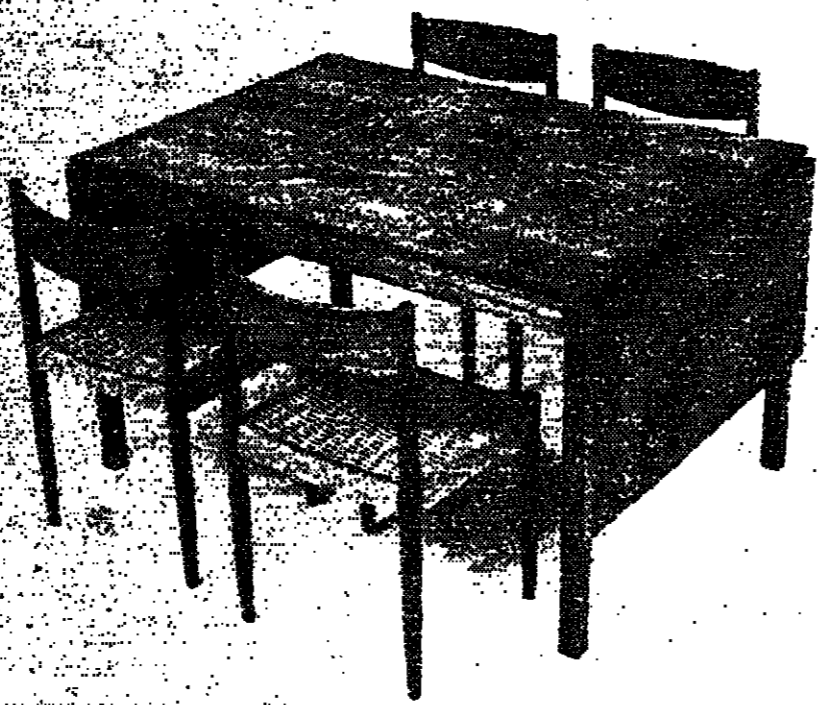

East Germans Protesting Exile of Dissident

SPECIAL TO THE NEW YORK TIMES
EAST BERLIN, Nov. 19—A protest in East Germany against the exile of Wolf Biermann, a dissident poet and singer, grew today as more than 70 leading figures in the artistic community attached their names to a petition asking the government to reconsider the move and asking the Communist rulers to reconsider.

In the face of the Government's evident determination to crack down on dissidents, a large number of actors, authors and artists appeared willing to speak up against repression.

"Unless we act now in support of Biermann, we may lose all our artistic and cultural freedoms," one of the signers said in a letter to the East German Government originally signed by 13 of the country's best-known authors and artists, that Mr. Biermann be allowed to return home. "We protest against his being stripped of his citizenship," the letter said.

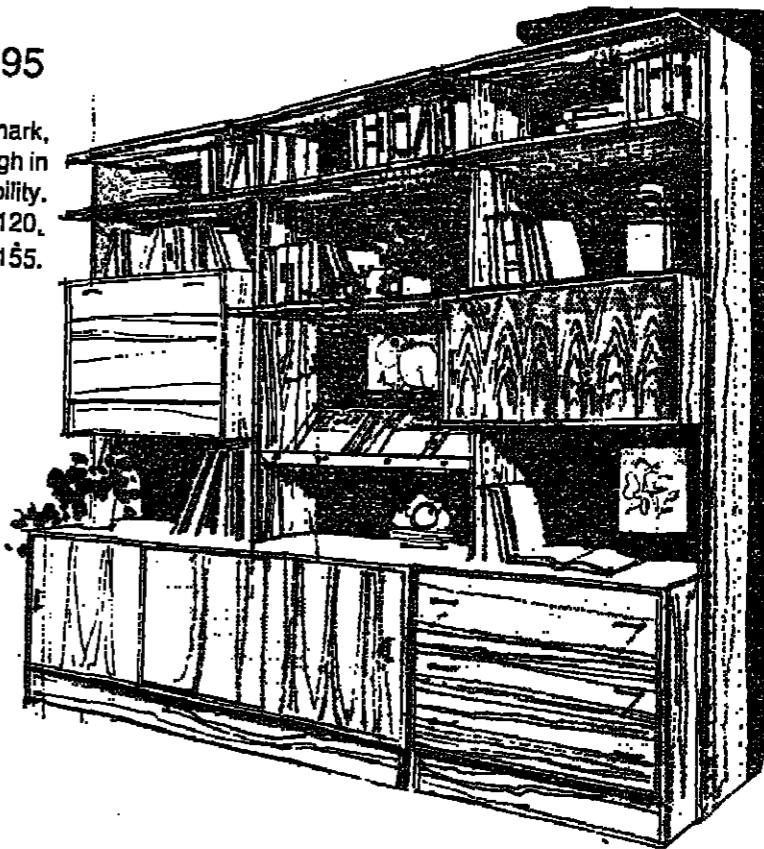

Biermann, while on a concert tour in East Germany, was informed Tuesday he had been deprived of East German citizenship and could not go back to East Germany, where his wife and baby son reside.

Carter Confers With C.I.A. Chief; Bush Calls Him 'Well Prepared'

By E. DRUMMOND AYRES Jr.
Special to The New York Times
GA., Nov. 19—George Bush, director of Central Intelligence, came today to share his organization's list of secrets and spy techniques with President-elect Jimmy Carter. Two men conferred from 1 to 7 p.m. as long as expected, and Mr. Bush told reporters: "I showed a very keen interest. He obviously well prepared. His questions were right on target."
While Mr. Carter released the list of 11 persons who were said to be "representative" of the type of citizens who would be advised by the President-elect as he selected officials for his administration.
List Is Called 'Balanced'
"Quite balanced," Jody Powell, Mr. Carter's press spokesman, said when he assessed the make-up of the list. It included on the list were the Rev. Jesse M. Heesburg, President of the University of Notre Dame; Lane Kirkland, secretary-treasurer of the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations; Vernon Jordan, executive director of the Urban League; Irving Shapiro, the chairman of the board of the Du Pont Company, and Robert Strauss, the chairman of the Senate National Committee on Intelligence. Others were Lucy W. Benson, former president of the National League of Women Voters; Carol Foreman, executive director of Consumer Federation of America; Marian Wright Edelman, executive director of the Children's Defense Fund; Hank Lacayo, the

CARTER'S WIFE PROMISES MENTAL HEALTH PANEL

She Tells Meeting in Philadelphia Her Husband Will Set It Up
Special to The New York Times
PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 19—Wearing a blue delegate's ribbon and a tiny gold peanut pinned to her blue dress, Rosalynn Carter announced today that her husband had promised to establish a President's commission on mental health after he takes office.
The announcement drew prolonged applause. Her listeners were some 500 delegates to the annual meeting of the National Association for Mental Health.
The majority seemed to share the view of the South Carolina delegate who said, "Wearing a drink in the hotel bar after Wednesday's sessions were over, Rosalynn's interest in mental health will give our organization a tremendous boost."
Mrs. Carter told the delegates here that her interest in mental health dates from Jimmy Carter's 1970 campaign for the Georgia governorship. Mrs. Carter said that as she traveled around the state, she was amazed at the number of people who told her of mental health problems in their families.
"I began to realize that something had to be done," she said, "and that we were the ones that had to do it."
Mrs. Carter attended the convention here as both a member of the national board and as a voting member of the Georgia delegation. She has also attended three previous national conventions of the association and a number of state and local meetings in Georgia.
Yesterday she flew in from her home in Plains, Ga., in time to attend an hour-long workshop on mental health in mental planning.

Carter Adviser on Resources Quits, Citing Friction

By GLADWIN HILL
Special to The New York Times
LOS ANGELES, Nov. 19—Jimmy Carter's top adviser on natural resources and the environment, Joseph Browder, has quit, attributing his action to frictions with "political" strategists in the President-elect's transition organization.
Spokesmen for Mr. Carter in Washington ascribed the 38-year-old conservationist's action to pique over not having been offered a high enough position in the new administration.
Mr. Browder, former director of the Environment Policy Center, a Washington lobby organization, headed one of 10 teams on postelection policy that had prepared "option" and position papers for Mr. Carter in recent months.
He was named on Tuesday as a member of a Carter team on "interior and energy" that is starting work in Washington.
However, Mr. Browder said in a telephone interview today that Jack H. Watson Jr., who is directing the Carter transition efforts, had told him he was being given only a token position, without responsibility or authority, because other top advisers had taken umbrage over a long period at many of Mr. Browder's policy and personnel recommendations.
A major bone of contention, Mr. Browder charged, was a promise made by Frank Moore, Mr. Carter's Congressional liaison designee, to oil industry people in Texas, in anticipation of $200,000 in campaign contributions, to exclude certain individuals from "input" to Mr. Carter on energy matters.
Two of these persons, he said, were S. David Freeman, director of a controversial Ford Foundation energy study who was one of Mr. Browder's policy planning associates, and Lee White, an oil industry lobbyist and former member of the Federal Power Commission who has been outspoken on consumer interests.
Other issues on which his recommendations had vexed Carter political strategists, Mr. Browder said, were strip-mining regulation, synthetic fuel development, Indian representation, and reorganization of Federal energy agencies.
In addition to Mr. Moore, Mr. Browder mentioned, as Carter officials who had insisted on his being "neutralized," Hamilton Jordan, another top transition officer, and Stuart Eizenstat, who was campaign issues coordinator.
"After the election they insisted to Watson that I have no authority or responsibility," he said, "and Tuesday night Watson said he'd lost so many battles with the campaign people he wasn't going to fight them on me. So I told him I was bowing out."
Says He Corrected Data
"I have as much faith in Jimmy Carter as I ever did," he continued. "His heart and mind are in the right place. But some of his political people are sealing him off from the real world. I haven't been able to contact him personally for several months."
Mr. Carter's transition press spokesman in Washington, Barry Jagoda, said Mr. Browder's allegation about Mr. Freeman's being excluded from Carter councils was belied by the fact that Mr. Freeman had been named to the same interior-energy team that Mr. Browder was assigned to.
"Our position," Mr. Jagoda added, "is simply that Mr. Browder wanted more responsibility than he was asked to fulfill."
Mr. Browder said trouble first developed early in the Carter drive when he embarrassed some campaign officials by correcting "some inaccurate information" they had fed him on strip-mining legislation.
The Freeman-White issue came up in August, Mr. Browder said, when he was organizing an energy briefing for the candidate, and Mr. Moore insisted that the men be excluded, despite their acknowledged expertise, on the ground that "when you have to raise $200,000 you'll do anything."
"What really took the roof off," Mr. Browder continued, "was when the political people wanted to bring in some independent energy experts into the Carter organization, and I pointed out the candidates they were discussing were a lawyer for Exxon, a lawyer for American Electric Power, and a couple of former Project Independence public relations men. They were going to name a Washington lawyer to coordinate the energy task force, and I pointed out he happened to be a lobbyist for El Paso Natural Gas."
In Washington, Mr. Moore called Mr. Browder's charge "ridiculous" but conceded that he had not invited Mr. Freeman to the meeting. But he insisted that it was not because of Mr. Freeman's views on energy policy, but that all the positions for the meeting had been previously set.
Mr. Moore pointed out that Mr. Freeman was working now on an energy study group for the transition office.
Cites 'Legitimate Concern'
"People in the energy industry are well aware that people in the public interest field have a legitimate concern for energy policy and should be heard," Mr. Moore said, adding, "And they will be heard."
Mr. Browder said that his selection of Harris Arthur, a Navajo, as an "objective" Indian spokesman was objected to by campaign officials who wanted Peter McDonald, a Navajo leader identified with coal, oil and other resource development.

Balanchine's 'Bugaku' Danced; Peter Schaufuss in Male Role

By CLIVE BARNES
George Balanchine's 'Bugaku' is a strange work. It has music composed by Toshiro Mayuzumi, and I well recall that, when it was first given at the City Center in 1963 (the score itself is a year older), at most performances the audience gently giggled. Nowadays no one that endures it says we have become that sophisticated. Or you could say, that we had discovered this plangently oriental score to be just a trifle boring, and that even David Hayes's unquestionably brilliant setting had its moments of fashion-book despair. And the Karinska costumes still look more invented than designed. Yet the work works. One is so often up against this disparity in Mr. Balanchine's genius: He is a genius, operating reasonably enough, in a visual field, who happens to have limited visual taste. He recognizes the divinity of anything as long as it keeps moving. He seems less secure, es-thetically, when at stops still, as in a Karinska costume, or in set pieces on the drawing board. At the New York State Theater Thursday night, Peter Schaufuss danced the male role in 'Bugaku' for the first time, partnering Suzanne Farrell. Mr. Schaufuss was feral, there was a suppressed violence to his movements, a coarseness to his interpretation that almost denied the role's conception. Edward Villella always danced it with a menacing gentleness, and that seemed right. Mr. Schaufuss dances it with a gentle menace, and that seems subtly wrong. The ballet is not meant to be a rape but a marriage. The program also included the season's first performance of Mr. Balanchine's 'Duo Concertant,' most elegantly danced by Kay Mazzo and Peter Martins. How superbly they do this! With casual love — intense and yet best forgotten — of music hearing music for the first time.

GOING OUT Guide

CADE "200 Years of Illustrations," the new presentation of the New York Historical Society, features 1,000 original works by 700 American illustrators. Revere and John James Audubon are featured, along with leading modern illustrators. The Society of Illustrators, the Exton Corporation, the Fine Arts Society, and the Society of Illustrators are presenting this through Feb. 15, in a panorama of American society as seen through the eyes of artists. The exhibition is in the form of books, magazines, newspapers, and posters.

BACK The 1963 Broadway production "The Loves Me" has developed into a series of revivals over the years. The play, written by the late playwrights of the New York Players, is now being presented at the Church of St. Ignace, 2 East 90th St. by Pennino and Robin Haynes. The play, which was a major success in 1963, is now being presented by the same playwrights. The play is a comedy of manners, and is a must-see for anyone who loves the theater.

ROBERT WALLIS Newman stresses fluid dance. Newman is interested in the fluidity of dance. He is presenting a series of dances that are both beautiful and challenging. The dances are performed by some of the best dancers in the city. The performances are held at the American Theater Lab on Thursday nights.

RISE AND SHINE Visitors to the Hall of the Sun at the American Museum of Natural History will walk through three sections in exploring the new, permanent exhibition in the domed structure at 81st Street and Central Park West. The entrance area, in glowing yellow, demonstrates how the sun affects planet earth, with participatory displays operated by pushbuttons, cranks and levers to illustrate climate and weather, crops, eclipses, sunsets and other phenomena influenced by radiation. The second section depicts the sun in the universe, while the final area is a minitheater screening of sun photographs.

THE PLANETARIUM'S current sky show, "Follow the Sun," plays through Nov. 29 weekdays at 2 P.M. and 3:30 and weekends at 1 P.M., 2, 3, 4 and 5. "Star of Wonder," the Christmas sky show, begins Dec. 1. Planetarium hours are 1 P.M. to 5 weekdays, Saturdays from 10 A.M. to 6 P.M. and Sundays starting at noon. Admission is $2.35 for adults and $1.35 for persons under 18 years.

Concert: By Vocal Arts Ensemble

Music: Holliger's String Quartet

Though best known as a virtuoso oboist, Heinz Holliger is also a composer, having studied with Pierre Boulez. His avant-garde String Quartet (1973) was one of two works to receive first American performances at a concert of contemporary Swiss music Thursday night at Carnegie Recital Hall.

Jacques Guyonnet's "Immemoriales for piano and electronic sources (1964-70), was a violent, rhetorical exercise that seemed overlong and insubstantial. But a third, older work, Klaus Huber's "Moteti Cantiones" for string quartet (1962-63) was a memorable surprise.

Herbert Blenstock, regional commissioner of the bureau, said that seasonally adjusted, the September-October rise was three-tenths of 1 percent, which, he said, "compared favorably with average monthly increases of 0.5 percent in the preceding four months."

Bando and Garland were the ninth and 10th free agents to sign under the sport's revolutionary reserve system, and all 10 players have opted for teams with worse records than the teams they left.

Take Bando, for example. A third baseman who played on Oakland's three straight World Series champions, he signed with Milwaukee for a package known to be worth at least $1.5 million.

George Steinbrenner and Gabe Paul were in Providence, R.I., Kapstein's headquarters, yesterday but returned home without Grich. They were not giving up, however.

Smith Bows To Connors; Nastase Out

WEMBLEY, England, Nov. 19 (AP)—Ilie Nastase was beaten in an upset, but top-seeded Jimmy Connors defeated Stan Smith, 6-3, 7-5, today to advance to the semifinals of the $125,000 Grand Prix tennis tournament.

Nastase, of Rumania, lost to Wojtek Fibak of Poland, 7-6, 6-7, 6-4, in a tense 2½-hour match in which both players complained about the officiating.

Connors complimented Smith on his play, calling him "a much improved player" and saying he "has become a very difficult man to beat."

After defeating Smith, Connors confirmed he would not play in the Commercial Union Masters tournament at Houston early next month, even though he had qualified for the event.

"I climb little steps in back wall of court and look down inside at this game," Hashim Khan wrote in collaboration with Richard Randall. "All walls are brick covered by plaster. Floor is cement. S. W. Louisiana Cleared Of Recruiting Infractions

LAFAYETTE, La., Nov. 19 (AP)—An investigation has found nothing to back up charges that the University of Southwestern Louisiana hired an illegal football recruiting coach, a state investigator said today.

"I could find no evidence to indicate that any of the charges were based in fact," said Irwin Sibille, who conducted the exhaustive investigation in his capacity as athletic commissioner of the State Board of Trustees.

The charges centered on whether Madison Firmin, who quit his job as Bunkie High School coach in mid-season, was recruiting for the university. Firmin and the university denied it. National Collegiate Athletic Association regulations carefully outline how many coaches can be hired by a university and how they can recruit prospective players.

Boxer Stripped of Title

ROME, Nov. 19 (AP)—Cemal Kamaci of Turkey has been stripped of his European junior welterweight boxing title for his refusal to fight David Green of Britain, the European Boxing Union announced today. Green will now fight Jean Baptiste Piedvache of France on Dec. 7 in London, with the winner being proclaimed the champion.

Alouettes Plan to Lecture Rodgers on His Conduct

MONTREAL, Nov. 19 (AP)—Johnny Rodgers, the former all-America back from Nebraska, is still a member of the Montreal Alouettes, but the Canadian Football League club will lay down the law to him concerning his conduct, team officials said in a statement today.

The statement said a study of Rodgers' behavior had left the team "unhappy" and that he would have to change his ways or the team "will then see if it is possible to bring our mutual contractual obligations to an end."

Mrs. Rankin, Miss Post Lead on 143's

HONG KONG, Nov. 19 (AP)—Judy Rankin of the United States and Sandra Post of Canada shot par 72's today and shared the lead with totals of 143 after the second round of the $50,000 Hong Kong women's open invitation golf tournament.

Both said they would have to play better in tomorrow's final round over the 5,199-yard course of the Royal Hong Kong Golf Club to win the top prize of $10,000.

Trailing them by one stroke was Jan Stephenson of Australia, one of the brightest stars of the golfing tour, who shot her second straight 72.

"I drove terribly all day, and I was playing more conservatively than usual," said Miss Stephenson. "I'll have to be more aggressive on the final day if I hope to win."

Mrs. Rankin, this year's leading money-winner on the tour of the United States Ladies' Professional Golf Association, and Miss Post were tied at 71 with Kathy McMullen of the United States after yesterday's opening round. However, Miss McMullen slumped today to a six-over-par 78 that included seven bogeys and a double bogey.

She finished the day tied for 10th place at 149 with Beverly Klass of the United States and Tu Ai-Yu of Taiwan.

Wykle Scores on 68-205 WINTER PARK, Fla., Nov. 19 (AP)—Lee Wykle of Daytona Beach, Fla., closed with a three-under-par 68 today to capture the $700 top money in the $6,000 Sheeah open tournament of the Florida P.G.A.

Wykle ended with an eight-under-par 205 for 54 holes on the 6,754-yard course of Sheeah Country Club.

He finished four shots ahead of his co-leader of the first two rounds, Jim Thorpe of Baltimore, who closed with a 72 for 209 and $800.

Dent Wins Florida P.G.A. APOPKA, Fla., Nov. 19 (AP)—Jim Dent of St. Petersburg shot a 71 today to win the $15,000 championship tournament of the Florida Professional Golfers' Association with a 19-under-par 197 for 54 holes.

Dent, who claimed $2,000 in first-place money, set a course record Wednesday when he fired a 61 at the par-72, 6,810-yard Errol Estate Country Club.

Butch Baird of Miami Beach finished second with 203. He was followed by Steve Melnyk of Amelia Island with 206. A former Masters champion, Charles Coody, who lives in Matland, was fourth with 208.

Ex-Flower Child Exults in Free Enterprise

By FRANCIS X. CLINES

In one decade, Laura Bruning has gone from flower child to entrepreneur, from West Side to Berkeley and back, from seeking freedom in stylized idleness to discovering that freedom can mean working hard in your own bookstore for 65 hours and more each week.

She opened the store a month ago at 148 West 72d Street, thereby taking the special risk that all the rest of us nonshopkeepers can only wonder at: All that money and all those hours to be invested in the search for uncertain profits and a Promethean sort of independence chained by the cash register.

An inheritance from her grandmother was the stake for Laura Bruning's Bibliophile. She returned from Berkeley with a divorce, "walked my dog for a year," and took a job as a clerk in a bookstore, thinking she could read deeply by the register while others browsed.

Now this decision is her power and pleasure, and she deals with 25 to 30 different publishers and reads three or four weekly book guides in making her choices.

paperwork home to her West 85th Street apartment. "This is definitely the happiest time of my life," she says, as convincing as any book in her store. She seems heady with the chefflike power to include something special in her stock ("The Tao of Physics") while treating other ingredients like so much ketchup.

The factors that brought Laura Bruning to a shop on West 72d Street include the impulse that at age 31 she wanted to be responsible for something of value. Her hippie venture to California figures in "That wasn't freedom. But I learned what I didn't want, and I learned not to be ashamed of what I did want."

And the rise of feminism is counted by her as crucial. "Without the women's movement I wouldn't be here now," she says. "It simply wouldn't have occurred to me without consciousness raising. I spent a year reading everything in the movement and I've kept what I want and need from it."

Standing behind the counter, she seems small and smart, nervous and happy. "I still can't believe it. I came in here early and just look around and it's mine," she nods at the shelves of books that are her new life.

Upstate Urban Sprawl Is Robbing Wilderness Trail of Its Wilderness

By HAROLD FABER

Special to The New York Times

PAWLING, N.Y., Nov. 9—The Appalachian Trail, a wilderness foot trail that existed in large part long ago as the Great Indian Warpath, is in jeopardy in New York State according to state and Federal officials and hikers who have walked the trail recently.

Housing developments and roads are destroying the wilderness quality of the footpath in Putnam and Dutchess Counties, where the trail crosses New York, making it the worst section of the entire 14-state, 2,000-mile route, according to a Federal park official.

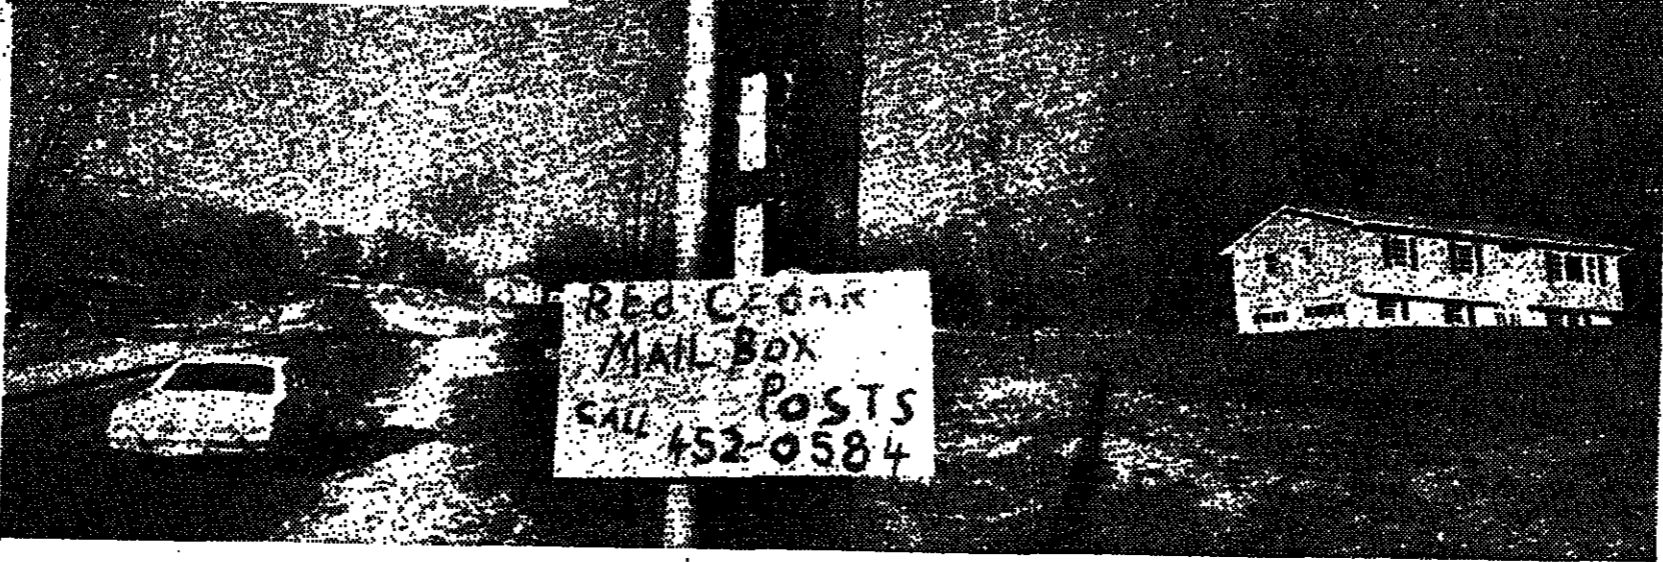

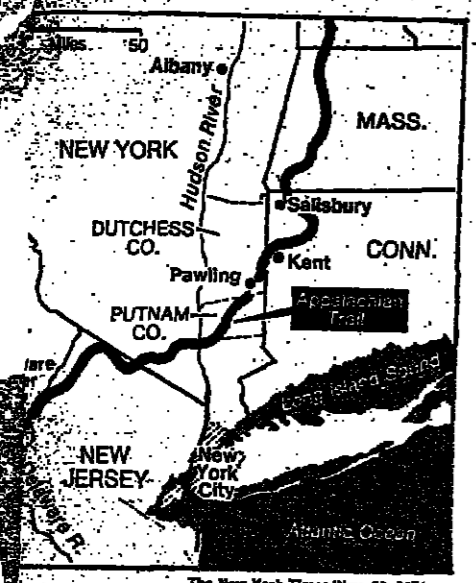

Since 1937, when the diverse parts of the trail along the Appalachian skyline were unified, daytime hikers and overnight back-packers have used it for excursions into the wilderness. A Park Service brochure describes the trail this way:

"Following the crests of long ridges, skirting mountain streams and sparkling lakes, climbing rocky Alpine slopes or dropping to cross the largest rivers, following rural roads and traversing great areas of forest and wilderness, and boasting hundreds of spectacular vistas, the Appalachian Trail presents an exciting panorama of Eastern America."

However, in New York, New Jersey and Connecticut, houses, housing developments, paved roads, trucks and industrial parks are part of the panorama.

Steven Golden is a National Park Service official at the Appalachian

Harvard Freshman, 63 Years Old, Has an Advantage in History Class

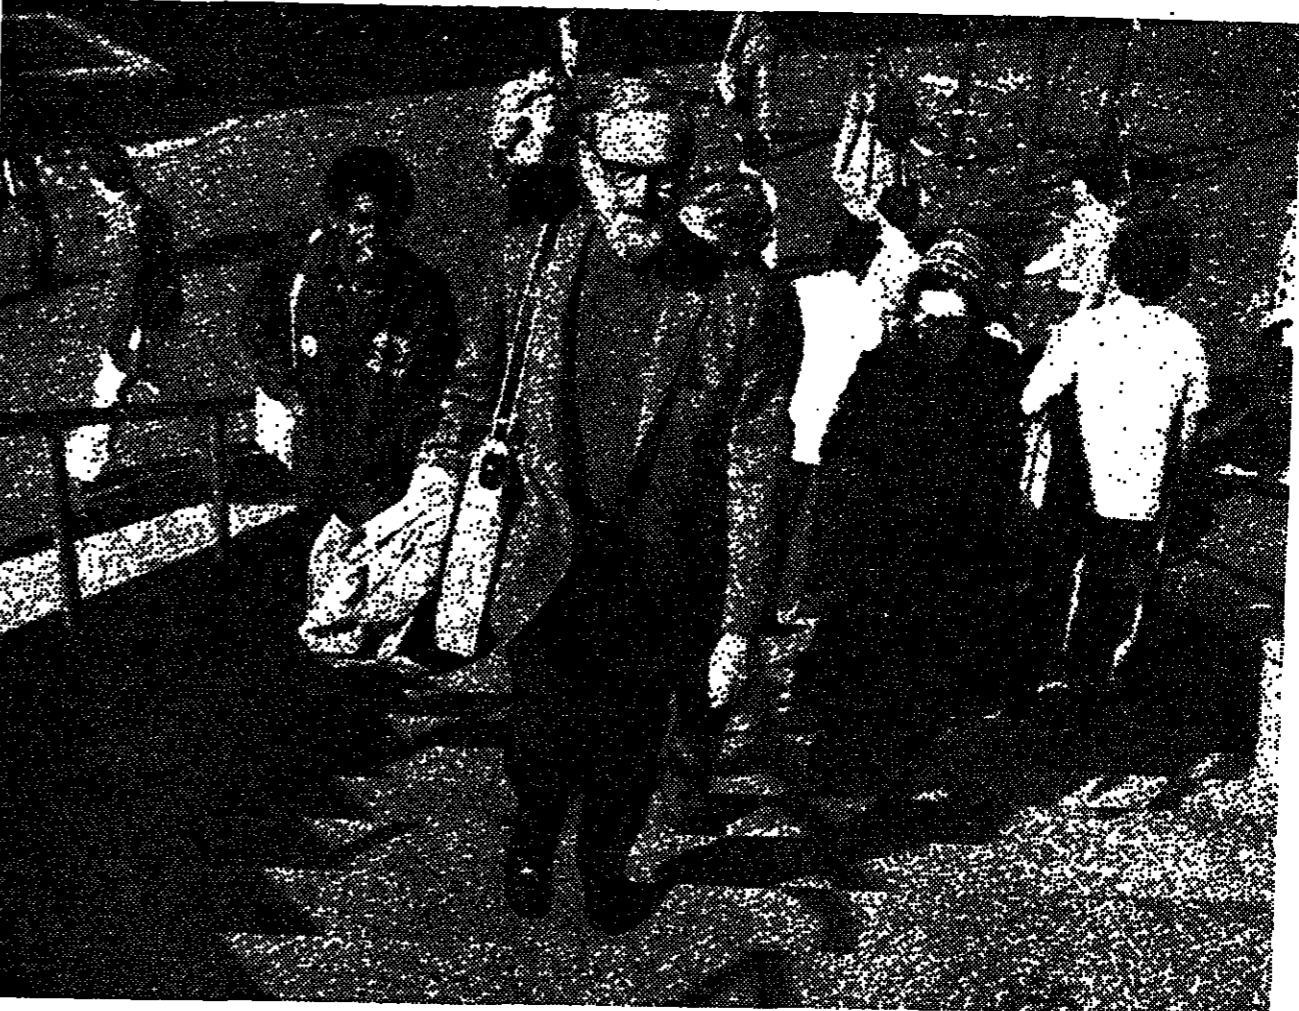

By EDWARD B. FISKE

Harry Gersh is the second generation in his family to go to Harvard. The first his son. Mr. Gersh is 63 years old and, as far as can be determined, is the oldest person ever to enroll as a freshman at Harvard. Every weekday he takes his tote bag that has been converted into a book bag and goes off to pursue his Harvard diploma with students at 35 years his junior.

In Manhattan. On the side he wrote more than 100 radio and television scripts, numerous magazine articles and nine books, mostly on Jewish religion and culture. Mr. Gersh and his wife, Violet, lived in Tuckahoe, N.Y., where they raised their two children. Their son, John, went to Harvard but dropped out in 1968 in the spring of his senior year. He completed his studies elsewhere and now teaches electrical engineering at the United States Naval Academy. Their daughter, Ruth, a 1975 graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, is a graduate journalism student at the University of Michigan.

history because I lived through them," he said. But there are also disadvantages. Mr. Gersh says that he occasionally gets "absolutely lost" in his astronomy class because he learned his math so long ago. "The professor just assumes everyone knows how to calculate the convergence of two stars," he said.

Confusion Quotient Is High Mr. Gersh has developed a somewhat different perspective on the academic world. "I came with a kind of visionary image of Harvard as a community of scholars," he recalled. "The reality is a little different. For example, the confusion quotient is quite high. I wanted to take one course, but when I showed up there were 100 people out in the hall unable to get in. Young people can live with chaos, but an older person finds it upsetting."

Mistaken for Professor Gersh is a short, pleasant man with his beard, pipe, turtle neck and sports coat. He is usually asked to be a professor. "The guards usually ask me for my I.D.," he says. He was born in Philadelphia in 1912, shortly after graduation from Philadelphia High School, had to drop out to help support his family. He took courses at various colleges but never completed a college degree.

Received $10,000 Grant To help pay Harvard's $4,200 tuition as well as other expenses Mr. Gersh managed to negotiate a form of assistance that is not usually part of a financial aid package: a $10,000 grant from the Ford Foundation to write about his experiences. "The guy is unusually lively and interesting," explained Peter de Janosi of the foundation staff. "We thought he would provide some useful insights into the experiences of older students."

The year-old moratorium on the payment of more than $1 billion in New York City's short-term notes was declared unconstitutional by the New York State Court of Appeals. The 5-to-1 ruling, a dramatic reversal of two lower-court decisions, invalidated the cornerstone of the financial mechanism that saved the city from bankruptcy last year and stunned state and city officials. However, the state's highest tribunal said that holders of city notes were "not entitled" to any immediate payments, if the payments disrupted the city's delicate fiscal situation. [1:6.]

George Meader was freed from prison after family posted bonds totaling $100,000 of it in cash. Meader, who has been in prison 10 months, is eligible to remain free on appeal for a new trial on her conviction. She was sentenced to seven years in prison on a Federal District Judge William Orrick Jr., who also allowed her to go on bail. [1:1-2.]

Business/Finance

The shift of industry and jobs from the North to the South has been greatly exaggerated, according to a report sponsored by the Office of Economic Research of the Government's Economic Development Administration. The report said that "retroic and biased sources" that contributed to competition between the regions may harm the economic development of both. [1:4-5.]

Ewald B. Nyquist was dismissed as Education Commissioner, his term to end no later than June 30, by the New York State Board of Regents in an 8-to-7 vote. Members of the Regents, the state's highest education policy-making body, exchanged bitter charges and angry denials about the board's motivations in dismissing the controversial Commissioner. Several board members and State Education Department officials wept, and a deputy commissioner, Thomas D. Sheldon, submitted his resignation in protest. [1:1-3.]

Business/Finance

A reduction in its discount rate, from 5 1/2 to 5 percent, was announced by the Federal Reserve Board. The Fed said that "the action will bring the discount rate into better alignment with short-term rates generally." But the reduction was widely interpreted as a response to growing signs of a "pause" in economic growth. [3:6.]

General

A spurt in business spending was reported by the Commerce Department. It said that new orders for durable goods received by manufacturers rose in October in the first increase in four months, up $1.4 billion, or 3 percent, over the September level. [3:5.]

Sir Basil Spence, Coventry Cathedral Architect, Dies

By JOSEPH COLLINS
Special to The New York Times
LONDON, Nov. 19 — Sir Basil Spence, the architect, whose best-known building was Coventry Cathedral, died last night at his home in Eye, Suffolk. He was 69 years old.

Sir Basil Spence

Such attacks, Sir Basil confessed, were wounding. 'I'll say I've been hurt,' he said about Lord Molson's strictures. 'The architect is the servant of the public. He carries out as sensitively as he can the ideas and demands of his client.'

Edwin Lutyens. There he worked on the designs for the Viceroy's House in New Delhi. After serving with distinction in the Army in World War II, he returned to architecture in Edinburgh, designing schools, university buildings, theaters and housing projects.

His wider reputation in London started with work he did for the Festival of Britain (that opened in 1951 on the South Bank of the Thames (where the Royal Festival Hall now stands). In that year he won a competition for a cathedral to replace the one destroyed by German bombers in their pounding of the Midlands city.

Despite the initial shock to those to whom a cathedral automatically conjured up the traditional Gothic shapes, the building was a world-renowned landmark in a few years. Architectural writers warmed to it in the end. Sir Nikolaus Pevsner, one of the most prominent of them, had admired it from the start.

Mikva Is Declared The Victor in Race In Illinois for House

By SETH S. KING
Special to The New York Times

CHICAGO, Nov. 19—After two weeks of legal maneuvering in Cook County Circuit Court, Representative Abner J. Mikva, a Democrat who had been the incumbent, was declared the winner today in Illinois' Tenth Congressional District.

The official canvass gave Mr. Mikva the edge over former Representative Sam Young, his three-time Republican opponent, by 201 votes, or 50.04 per cent of the 213,407 ballots cast in the Nov. 2 voting.

Mr. Young had declared earlier that he would demand a recount. The official canvass in the Mikva-Young race was proclaimed today by the Cook County Clerk, Stanley Kusper, after Mr. Mikva agreed to drop a court suit in which he was asking for 2,638 absentee ballots tallied.

Absentee Ballots Not Counted

Through a mix-up in the county clerk's office on Election Day, these ballots did not reach the proper polling places in time to be counted, as Illinois law requires.

In his previous two races against Mr. Young in the normally Republican Tenth District, which includes suburban Evanston plus parts of other North Shore communities, Mr. Mikva won a majority of the absentee ballots, usually from students, and it was expected he would do so this time, which would have bolstered his lead over Mr. Young.

Mr. Young went into Circuit Court to block the count of these late ballots, contending they were invalid. One judge decided he did not have jurisdiction in the matter and a second was weighing a countersuit by Mr. Mikva challenging this contention when the incumbent withdrew his motion yesterday.

Mr. Mikva, a liberal, won a seat in Congress in 1968 and 1970 from the old Fifth District on Chicago's South Side. But in the 1971 redistricting his area was eliminated.

So in 1972 he moved to Evanston and ran in the newly drawn Tenth, one of the richest and most solidly Republican districts in the state.

That year Mr. Young, a conservative Evanston lawyer, beat him. But in 1974 Mr. Mikva unseated Mr. Young with 51 per cent of the vote. With this year's victory, Mr. Mikva apparently has become the first Democrat in modern times to represent the North Shore area for two consecutive terms.

Powers, a former chief criminal court judge and a former law partner of Chicago's Mayor Richard J. Daley, had failed to win approval of 80 per cent of his district's voters and was thus voted off the bench. He received only 58.84 per cent of the official canvass and his removal was regarded as a political defeat for the 74-year-old mayor, who is also chairman of the powerful Cook County Democratic Committee.

Only One Race in Doubt
WASHINGTON, Nov. 19—The decision that Representative Abner J. Mikva, a Democrat, was re-elected in Illinois leaves the outcome of only one Congressional election still in doubt.

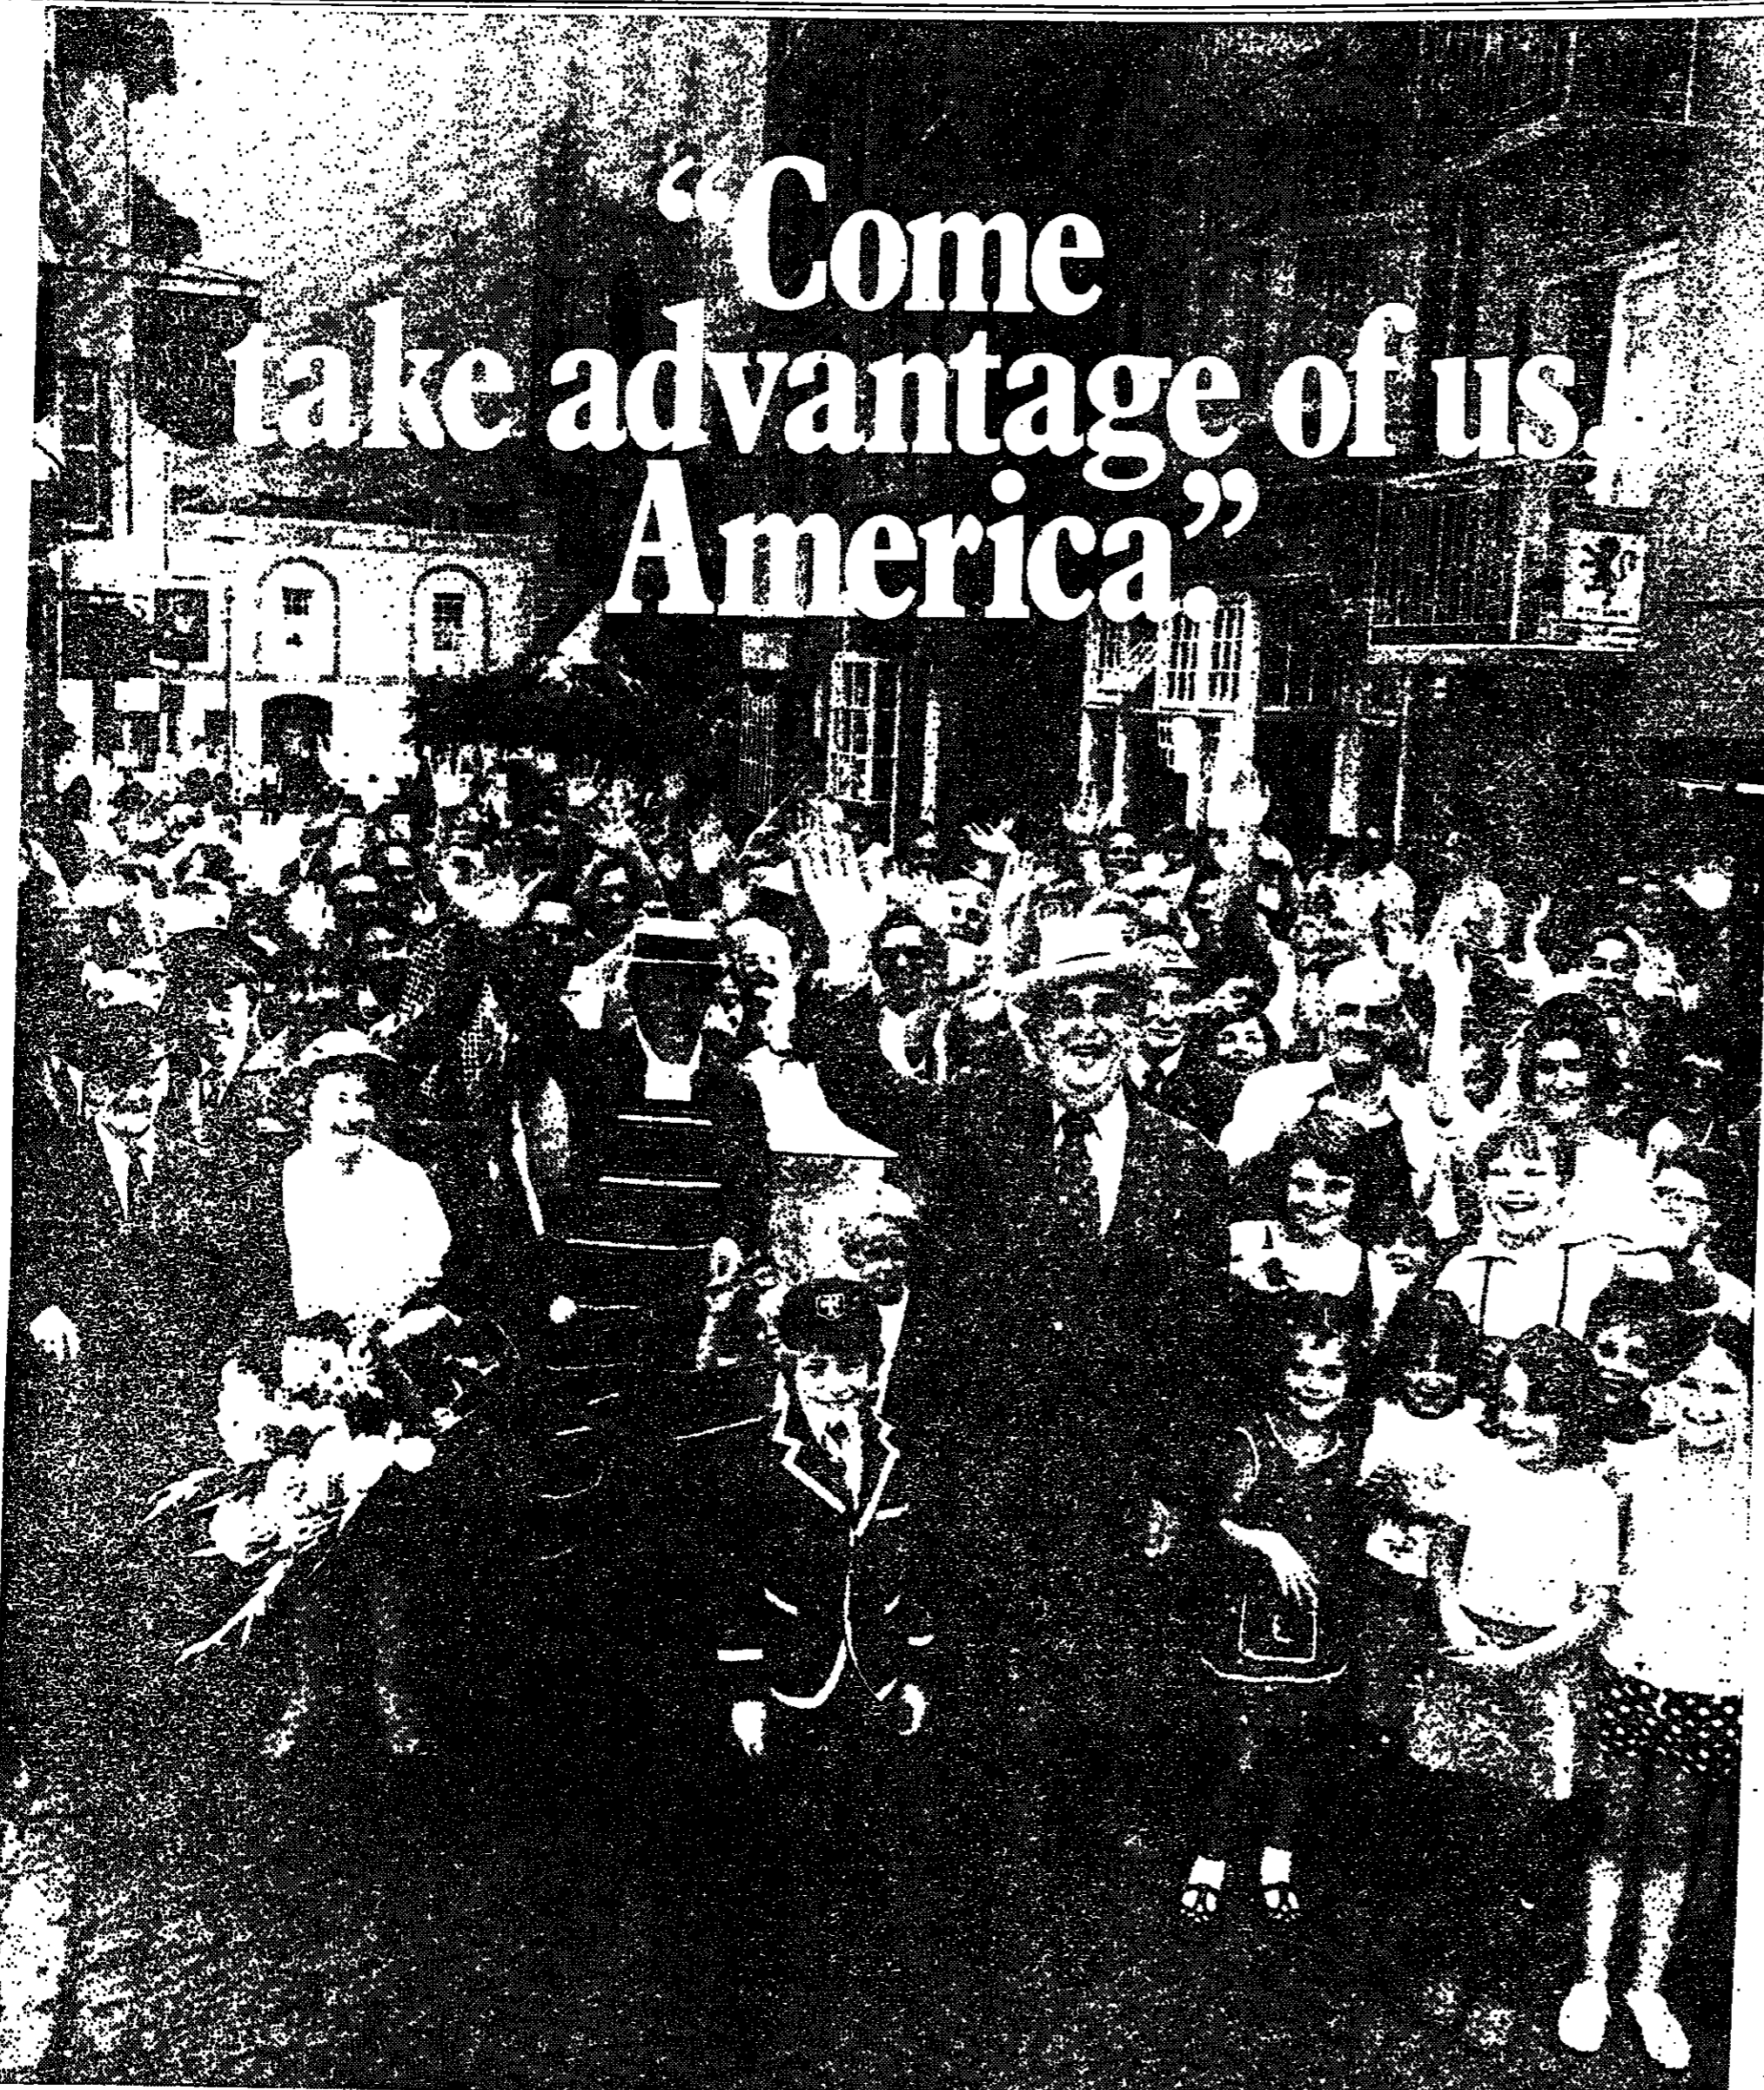

In the 22d Congressional District of Texas, near Houston, Representative Ron Paul, the Republican incumbent, apparently lost to Bob Gammage, Democrat, a former state senator, by 94 votes out of nearly 193,000 cast. However, a recount is in progress.
